

Finding Balance

School & Chores

At bedtime, meal time, or another convenient time of the day, the following questions can be used to foster conversation in families about balance, especially as it relates to our time sheltering in place. This week, we will be talking about school & chores:

Think about the time during which we have been staying at home.

What did you like about school during this time?
What did you like about chores during this time?

What was hard about school during this time?
What was hard about chores during this time?

What do you wish we could keep doing as a family (around school and chores) that we've done during this time?

What do you hope that we won't be doing (around school and chores) that we've done during this time?

What would you like to say "thank you" to God for about school and chores?

What would you like to ask God for help with about school and chores?

How can you continue to use the talents God has given you to learn and to help your family?

What is something you have "stuck with" at school (think about learning to play an instrument or a new language or skill)? What was the result?
God sticks with us.

Jesus tells us to love God and to love our neighbor. What might we be able to do at school that looks like loving our neighbor?
